

Making Charity Count - Number Day 2011

On 3rd December 2010 all Year 7 pupils took part in a fundraising Maths lesson raising money for the NSPCC. The pupils spent the previous week collecting sponsorship to take part in a variety of Maths puzzles and quizzes such as “Who Wants to be a Mathionnaire?” and “Countdown”. The pupils had great fun playing individually and in teams to win prizes. Tytherington Mathematics Department has taken part in this fundraiser for many years now but this year the pupils managed to raise a record amount of £561.87. We invited Helen Redman, a representative from the charity, to deliver an assembly to the Year 7 pupils explaining a bit more about why this charity is so important and how their money would be used to help many vulnerable children. Laura Nancollis and Elliott Braodhurst did the honours of presenting Helen with the cheque in the assembly.

The whole event was a huge success so we owe a massive thank you to all our Year 7 pupils for their hard work in raising money for this essential and worthy charity.
